The first thing we need to understand:

The “right setting” for our kids may not be a single setting & it may not be the right fit forever

Our kids evolve

Their needs change

The system keeps shifting

We need to be flexible

The second thing we need to understand:

We can never guarantee that we're making the right decision for our child

We can't see into the future

We need to be okay with the unknown

We need confidence in our decision making

We can employ tools to help us

Tools to help make decisions

MINDSET MATRIX

Use this table to document your fears, issues and concerns. Identify a different way to view the issue and switch your thinking to pinpoint the positives from each situation.

FEARS – list your fears, to put them in perspective	ISSUES – break down each issue to be addressed separately
FACTS – what do you know for sure?	SWITCH – if something happens, how can you turn it around?
UNKNOWNNS – list everything that's not a fact (assumptions, future concerns)	POSITIVES – what positives might come of this situation?

FEARS	FACTS	UNKNOWNNS	ISSUES	SWITCH	POSITIVES

MINDSET MATRIX - POSITIVE SPECIAL NEEDS PARENTING

MINDSET MATRIX IN ACTION

Face up to your fears

Identify the facts

Ignore the unknown

Break down issues

Shift your outlook

Find the positives

Tools for finding the right fit

The right setting may change or be more than one setting - it helps to be flexible

We can never guarantee we're making the right decision - we need to be okay with that

Remember there are tools we can use to make more confident decisions
